Past Preservers steps Into the Unknown on the Discovery Channel

Into the Unknown with Josh Bernstein is a thrilling and far-flung journey around the world with the Discovery Channel's exciting and daring host, as he attempts to uncover and examine some of mankind's most intriguing ancient secrets and comes face to face with spectacular natural wonders. The show was produced for the Discovery Channel by Darlow-Smithson and Past Preservers provided on-screen talent for the Egyptian episode. The series premieres in the USA on the 18 August 2008 on the Discovery Channel.

What they say

'Global traveler, explorer, and educator Josh Bernstein has a voracious appetite for knowledge and a strong desire to do whatever it takes to explore the world's hidden treasures, mysteries and natural wonders. From uncovering secret mummification rituals in the jungles of Papua New Guinea to exploring the ancient wealth and wonder of Timbuktu; from investigating a radical theory regarding elephant attacks in East Africa to revealing the true lifestyle and status of gladiators in the Roman Empire, no location is too remote, no culture too exotic, no goal too ambitious.'
